Samuel T. Johnson, an Old Citizen, Takes Opium and Whisky and Dies of The Effects.

Had Just Been Married And Wa Thought to be Enjoying the Sweets of Life.

Mr Samuel T Johnson, or "Uncle Sammy," as he is, familiarly called, to service. Sunday Quarterly Conference the surprise of all his friends and relatives has committed suicide, and his tives, has committed suicide, and his remains are now lying beneath the sod of the Cloverport cemetery. The particulars of the sad and rash occurrence are rather clcu-led and somewhat mysterious, but as far as could be gleaned by a NEWS representative they are about as follows:

A year ago or more Mr. Johnson be came a widower by the death of his first wife He was a sprightly old man in his seventy-eight year and was soon looking for another wife. She was easily found, a UncleSammy was very well fixed in this world's goods, having a nice home and a pension income from the Government of $24, a month, and on the second day of December, sixteen days before his death, he was married to a Mrs Estes, a widow who formerly came here from Lewisport, Ky. The match seemed to be a happy one and Uncle Sammy frequently expressed himself to his fiends as being well pleased with his new domestic surround-

But soon a change seemed to come over the spirit of his dreams. He grew despondent and last Sunday he was extremely so. He told a grand-daughter, who was living with him that he was going to get some poison and kill himself. He came down town and got a pint of whisky and some opium As he was returning home he told a neighbor that by Sunday morning his troubles would be over. When he returned home his granddaughter asked him if he had obtained any poisou, and he replied that he had not, but if he had it was none of her business. She saked him why he wanted to commit suicide and his reply was that if she were in as much trouble as he was, she would want to die too, but he would not tell what troubled him. He drank the whisky in a ressonable length of time, and Mrs. Johnson and his grand-daughter remained in the room with him all night. It was not until his sleep seemed too sound that they became alarmed. They then searche i his pockets and found some opinm, and f aring that he had taken worked with the doomed man all day of Cloverport, are spending a delightful Monday, but to no avail. He never re grined consciousness, but he lingared till 9 o'clock p m before his spirit took its flight. The deceased was seventy eight years old the 3rd day of D cember 1896 He was a well-to-do farmer and was wellknown ill over this section. Two or ti res v a s ago he bought a lot and built a nice c stage residence in the Eastland suburb of this city, and moved to town, He was an old veterar, and was a member of the Murray Post, G. A. R., which has its endquarters here.
